Why start early?

About Awards by Nomination

Identification of potential nominees, writing an initial case for their nomination, and developing the written case to meet criteria succinctly and robustly are all done by volunteers at club and Association level. This takes time. The ONSW deadlines are set to ensure there is enough time for this work prior to the meeting of the ONSW Board at which the nominations are approved.

The initial nomination does not have to be polished. It does need to have the reasons for the nomination. The Awards Committee may find that the nominee is a better fit for a different category. There may also be a need for gathering more information.

For non-ONSW awards (e.g. Sport NSW, Orienteering Australia) there are external deadlines.

For ONSW awards, there needs to be time for trophies and certificates to be prepared.

Who Can Submit a Nomination?

Any NSW orienteer or NSW orienteering club can nominate someone. Send to awards@onsw.asn.au.

All awards nominations are approved by the ONSW Board. External awards at state or national level require support of the state association, whether submitted directly or through Orienteering NSW.

What Should be Submitted?

Most awards now have word limits, and they vary. In general, a brief response or citation (100-200 words) and possibly a longer submission (800 -1000 words). Sport NSW most recently required two criteria-addressing statements, each of no more than 200 words. An initial nomination statement submitted to ONSW should aim to address the criteria with as much evidence as possible. Length is less of a concern for the initial submission.

Good quality photos (1-2 MB) to accompany a nomination are desirable for some awards and essential for others (e.g. Sport NSW awards). It will be extremely helpful if anyone putting forward a nomination also sources in some way two photos of the nominee: one photo in appropriate action and one photo close-up.

Who Makes Awards Happen?

Clubs and individual orienteers provide names and reasons for an award. ONSW Board members, employed and volunteer officers are also well-placed to make suggestions.

Volunteers associated with the Awards Committee provide consultation, development and editorial work leading to a nomination document submitted to the ONSW Board for approval.

For ONSW awards, after Board approval the ONSW Office ensures trophies, badges and certificates are produced, and distributed and the news is communicated.

For OA awards and awards external to the orienteering community, the nomination is approved by the ONSW Board and submitted on behalf of the Board (currently by the Awards Committee Chair on ONSW's behalf).
